Delivering Excellence: Better for the Planet, Better for Society, Better for the Bottom Line

The construction industry of the future needs to deliver better social, economic, environmental, sustainable and resilient outcomes in a more productive way. We recognise that we need to do things differently, society and mother nature deserve better from us. For us as an industry we need to collectively organise to deliver in a fairer and more sustainable way that unlocks the potential and capacity for better delivery.

The building blocks for a better built environment are already in place. In line with Constructing Excellence's core principle of sharing best practice and emerging innovation we will be bringing together leading practitioners and thinkers to explore through three lenses.

Panel Discussions

Better for the planet – Mother nature deserves better! How do we build on excellence and emerging technologies to deliver a built environment that minimises its emissions and impact on the natural environment.

Better for people – Society deserves a better built environment! We need to improve how we enable people to thrive across the industry. We'll be showcasing excellent practice, looking at what is around the corner with practical examples of what we can do now to better support society.

Better for the bottom line – fairer and commercially sustainable delivery. We'll be showcasing excellence through the Gold Standard Verification, looking at how collaboration is enabling the implementation of technologies that unlock more efficient delivery and exploring how we incentivise productivity.

Connect

Creating new and re-enforcing existing connections is a key part of the conference. Lots of time and space is dedicated to allow participants to interact and strengthen the networks vital to drive a better construction industry.

Insight

Participants gain insight into the latest thinking and drivers of change across the sector.

Inspire

Through best practice and leading edge examples we inspire participants to embrace better ways of working and implement change in their organisations and projects.
